AMERICAN LIBERALITY.

No less than ten news items in this morning's World chronicle large gifts or bequests to charities or beneficent institutions in as many American cities. These footing up $90,000; nearly $3,000,000 for public libraries in Chicago, Hartford, Cons., and Montpeller, Vt.; $3,000,000 for a botanical garden in St. Louis, Mo. a Home for Workingwomen in Providence, R. I., at a cost of $100,000; a Masonic Home in Richmond, Va.; $200,000 to Cleveland, O., for public institutions, and $25,000 to the Cincinnati Young Men's Christian Association. Six and a half millions of dollars bestowed for charitable and educational purposes in ten cities is a day's work of which all Americans can feel justly proud.

BE COURTEOUS, BUT FIRM.

The merry census-taker begins his tak ing to-day. At least, he begins to make efforts in that direction. Confined to its proper limits, the enterprise in which he is an agent is a most commendable and useful one, and all good citizens should help to expedite its progress as they may by giving prompt and intelligent answers to all the legitimate questions on the list.

There are, however, on this year's cate gory certain questions never before asked in census taking, and which are of doubtful propriety. These inquiries are with Over these objectionable questions it will be of no use to argue. The canvasser is obliged to ask them. Refuse firmly, but courteously, to answer them, and that will be the end of it.

IT SHOULD BE VETOLD.

toddler of twenty months and a child less than four years. The younger girl, creeping about the floor, had cut her hand by falling on a broken tumbier, a piece of glass lodging in the small palm. The cut was bandaged and poulticed, but instead of healing became ulcerated, and the child remained in her crib in a fewerish condition.

"I could not pay a doctor to come to the house," the mother said, "but I wrote a letter to the dispensary and received a postal card telling me to bring the child to the office."

Mrs. Cadwell and Mrs. Richardson, the wonderfully successful Spiritualistic mediums who have excited the awe, admirafor his assistance, electricity, was brought into play.

The Wonne's Woman Reporter, a brighteyed, frail little personage, with the apiritualistic advantage of premature gray hairs and an ethered air, succeeded as a seeler in making the acquaintance of Mrs. Cadwell and her lieutenant. Mrs. Richardson, and for weeks she communed with the spirits of a dead husband whom she never married, and dead friends who never existed; joined in singing old hymns, in fervently praising the wondrous medium, and in paying $1 per sennee as often as she could get a chance to kneel at the feet of the spook priesters.

By dint of infinite fact, she gained permission to introduce her dear, dear "troflier" and afterward her "skeptical cousin."
